

PAULA FERARIO

Genre: Bluegrass
Band: Stillhouse Road

Originally born in Layton, Utah, Paula spent her youth living abroad in Greece, England, the Philippines, and many stateside locations before settling down in Santa Barbara, California. She immediately fell in love with old-time, Irish, and contra dance fiddle music through the inspiration of violin maker and fellow fiddler Jim Wimmer. After moving to St. George, she continued to develop her fiddle style, took up the acoustic guitar, and immersed herself in modern and traditional bluegrass music. It took a very sorrowful and moving song, "You'll Never Leave Harlan Alive" (performed by Patty Loveless, written by Darryl Scott) to awaken her singing abilities. Since then, she has become a talented and appreciated vocalist whose voice is not only warm and soulful, but also perfectly suited to the bluegrass music so close to her heart. It is her passion for the music, and the purely honest and authentic delivery, that captivate her audience. Paula continues to pursue her first love of playing the fiddle, and will often surprise listeners with a delightful fiddle tune. She also enjoys making song selections for the band, creating promotional materials, and collaborating with Joe in his songwriting endeavors. Paula performs with Joe in their "Stillhouse Road" Band.
